

KPMG SA appoints new boss

KPMG South Africa has appointed Ignatius Sehoole as chief executive officer. He will take up this role on 1 May 2019.

His primary objective will be to restore public trust in the company. The audit firm has been embroiled in controversy since its links to Gupta-owned companies and a bogus report of a South African Revenue Service rogue unit were exposed last year. This led to the en masse resignation of its senior management and a significant number of clients jumping ship.

For more, visit: <https://www.bizcommunity.com>