

Network with speakers from around the world

The internationally affiliated National Speakers Association of Southern Africa (NSASA) will be holding its second national convention at the Southern Sun Grayston in Sandton, Johannesburg, 20 – 22 April 2007. “The agenda will consist of keynote presentations and educational workshops, as well as ‘meet the pro’ sessions. A range of topics, including presentations on improving public speaking, building a speaking business, how to write a book, and general motivational presentations will be included in the impressive line-up,” says Billy Selekane, NSASA chairman. “It is a fantastic opportunity for fellow speakers to meet and network from all over the world.” Go to www.nsasouthafrica.co.za for more info.
